Edition

July/August 1998

Mercury Rising, the second film in the Saturday First Run Film Series, will be shown on August 2. See page 6 for details.

Remember It Came from Outer Space? Scary stuff in 1953. It's back, along with other drive-in monster movie classics. The Wednesday Classic Film Series is now showing at Greenbriar School Auditorium. For a complete listing, see page 6.

Our Temporary Home Is Now Open!

With the bulk of the moving project completed, the library's home at the former Jewel store is open for business! In two short months, the vacant store has been transformed into a fully-functioning library. You will find the facility bright and clean, but definitely more compact. Most important, you will find a friendly, service-oriented staff eager to help you.

After a short period of adjustment for our staff and patrons, we expect to phase in all of the traditional library services to which you have been accustomed. Programming will be limited in this smaller location. Book discussions and reviews, for example, will continue on site. The Wednesday and Saturday film series, however, will move to the Greenbriar School Auditorium (please see the article on page 6).

Overall, the convenient location will provide a comfortable home until the library's construction project is completed in late summer of 1999. We will do all we can to make this temporary situation as efficient and pleasant for you as possible. We know that the new library will be worth the wait.

A Special Thank You for Gifts from...

Monstrous Film Series
Includes 3-D Fun!

The Wednesday Classic Film Series brings back those great drive-in monster flicks you all remember as kids. Now you can introduce your Goosebumps fans to your favorite film monsters like Mothra, the Tinger, the radioactive giant spider, The Planet of the Apes, and the 3-D thrills of 1950's-era space aliens in It Came from Outer Space. See page 6 for a list of the films in the series.
